

The state's current $12 billion budget crisis is in large part a result of our state's inequitable tax code that relies on those with the least to pay the most.

Governor Ferguson has called for furloughs, 6 percent cuts at every agency our members work at, and closing facilities the most vulnerable depend on. It doesn't need to be this way, but we need to act fast.

Every day, lobbyists for billionaires and corporations are in Olympia encouraging our elected officials to cut deeply rather than fix what is the second most upside-down tax code in the country.

We have to convince our elected officials to reject cuts and balance the budget by having the wealthy and the most profitable corporations pay what they owe. We do that by telling them the value of our work and how cuts would harm the Washingtonians who depend on it. Contact your elected official!
